Lawn Culture Australia

Trade Promotion Terms and Conditions

Welcome to Lawn Culture Australia. These are the terms and conditions for our June 2027 Major Giveaway trade promotion.

1 Our agreement

Who is this agreement between?

This agreement is between you (the person entering our trade promotion) and the promoter, Lawn Culture Australia Pty Ltd (ACN 675 751 336) trading as Lawn Culture Australia ('we', 'us', 'LCG', 'the promoter').

How long will this agreement last?

This agreement will start when it's accepted by you and will continue until the competition has been closed, winners have been drawn and prizes has been claimed and delivered.

Where we say so in this agreement, certain terms will continue to apply once this agreement has been terminated (for example, terms about confidentiality and intellectual property).

How can changes be made to this agreement?

Unless otherwise required by law, we will only change these terms and conditions prior to the commencement of the competition. If we do so, we will provide you with reasonable notice by posting updated terms and conditions and announcing this on our website.

How can you accept this agreement?

If this competition is open at the time you apply to become a member with us, then you will be deemed to have accepted these terms and conditions when you accept our membership terms and conditions.

If this competition opens after you've become a member, then you will be deemed to have accepted these terms and conditions 72 hours after we give you notice of the terms by email, if we do not receive an opt-out notice in that time.

If you send us an opt-out notice, you will not be entered into the trade promotion. Please note that opting out of any trade promotion does not entitle you to any discount on membership fees.

11 What happens if we disagree?

Dispute resolution

If we disagree about something that relates to this agreement, we both agree not to go straight to court or a tribunal unless we need urgent relief, like an interlocutory order.

We agree to follow the steps set out in this clause first.

(a) First, the party with the issue needs to tell the other person about the issue in writing so they understand what the problem is. This written notice needs to include the outcome that the person with the issue wants and the action they think the other person needs to take to settle the issue.

(b) Once the other person receives the notice of the issue, both parties agree to do their best to try and resolve the issue together within 20 business days.

If a dispute is declared, any communications between us are confidential and should be treated as 'without prejudice' negotiations for the purpose of evidence law. This means that neither of us can use these communications if we go to court.

Mediation

(a) If we can't resolve the issue on our own, we agree to select an independent mediator to help us work through the problem. We have up to 7 business days to select a mediator together.

(b) If we can't agree on a mediator, then we both agree to ask the President of the Law Society in NSW to appoint a mediator for us.

(c) If we have to mediate, we agree to attend virtual mediation wherever possible, otherwise, we agree to go to mediation in New South Wales and split the fees of equally between us.

This clause will continue to apply even if this agreement is terminated.
